The debate on the merits of converting a Tiptronic Porsche 911 to manual has been discussed many times. One of the reasons was the large percentage of Tiptronic cars that were actually produced. It was a popular option at the time, though today, many of us would far rather have the traditional manual gearshift.

The car, named the 911 Millennium edition was based on the Carrera 4 coupé. Only 911 cars were made. It came with polished “turbo look” wheels. This special edition was finished in Violet Chromaflair paint with natural leather interior and dark burr maple trim. The car was available with a Tiptronic or six-speed manual gearbox.

With PDK, you can still enjoy ‘manual’ mode, using the shifter like a sequential ‘box, pulling it ‘to’ for change ups and ‘away’ for lightning-quick change downs in a GT3. Remember though, it’s the other way around in Turbo/Carrera models. 7) PDK is the future. Quite simply, the days of the manual shifter are numbered.

The Battle Between Manual and Automatic Transmissions

A manual-transmission 911 Turbo is becoming a rarity and the breed may be facing extinction. We take a 997 Turbo in search of another mechanical relic, and look to the past and to the future

Porsche 911 Tiptronic to Manual Conversion - Is It Worth

Up until the early 2000's, all Porsches were offered with a manual transmission, but with the introduction of the Boxster, it was a great chance for Porsche to offer something to appeal to a broader audience. The Tiptronic automatic transmission, with an option of controlling shifts, was born.

An interesting fact is that in a test using two Porsche 997 Turbos, the car equipped with a Tiptronic gearbox were just as fast on the sprint 0-60 mph as the car equipped with a manual gearbox. Both cars tested did the sprint 0-60 mph in 3.4 seconds. So the Tiptronic gearbox is definitely shifting gears very fast.

As editor-in-chief MacKenzie notes, the Tiptronic makes the 911 Turbo the world's singular 24/7 exotic. A cinch to noodle through everyday traffic and not much harder to thunder along at

Porsche 996 - Wikipedia

Flat six has lifted the 5-speed manual 911 into the 160mph class with 0-60mph in less than six seconds. Yet the clever Tiptronic manual/automatic 4-speed transmission maintained almost exactly the claimed 159mph, slashed through the annoyance of every day suburban driving and allowed a very respectable 0-60mph two way average of 6.2 seconds.

Tiptronic's issues were also well documented, being hugely more expensive than the manual ($2950 extra in 1990), 1,3 seconds slower to 60mph than the manual in the case of the 964 911, and needed to be carefully learnt to attain the most from it.

Porsche 997: Tiptronic vs. Manual Transmission | Rennlist

Tiptronic can be shifted like a manual and it is a wonderful Porsche-patented invention, but sticking a fluid-filled torque converter between the engine and gearbox does blunt the experience. It feels wonderfully smooth when Alpine touring with the mrs or carrying the kids around, but when you're on your own and looking for fun, a manual gearbox will do it better.
