Questo lavoro è frutto dell'evento internazionale TECHA 2008 - Technologies Exploitation for the Cultural Heritage Advancement, dedicato alla presentazione delle nuove tecnologie per la conoscenza, la conservazione e la valorizzazione del patrimonio culturale. Il volume si articola in due sezioni entrambe suddivise nei quattro temi strategici per il patrimonio culturale: Analisi, diagnostica e monitoraggio, Materiali e tecniche di intervento, ICT e Tecnologie sostenibili per il patrimonio culturale. La prima sezione raccoglie le relazioni di esperti nazionali e internazionali che hanno preso parte ai workshop del primo giorno; nella seconda sono presentate 150 schede tecniche di tecnologie innovative proposte da ricercatori e imprenditori di tutta Europa in occasione del Technology Transfer Day. La manifestazione ha favorito la divulgazione delle migliori metodologie e tecnologie esistenti sul mercato e dato vita a momenti di discussione tra i diversi operatori del settore (istituzioni, centri di ricerca, aziende) sulle metodologie, le innovazioni e le problematiche inerenti il restauro e la fruizione del patrimonio culturale. This work is the result of the international event TECHA 2008 - Technologies Exploitation for the Cultural Heritage Advancement, devoted to the presentation of new technologies for the knowledge, conservation and valorization of cultural heritage. The book is divided in two sections both including the four strategic topics for cultural heritage: Analysis, diagnostics and monitoring, Materials and intervention techniques, ICT and Sustainable technologies for cultural heritage. The first section collects lectures of national and international experts attended the workshops of the first day; the second put together 150 technology data sheets presented by European researchers and entrepreneurs during the Technology Transfer Day. The event aimed at promoting the dissemination of the best available techniques and methodologies and at creating fruitful discussion panels among the various experts of the field (public bodies, research centres and companies) on methodologies, innovations and problems pertaining restoration and enjoyment of cultural heritage.

A Wharton professor and tech entrepreneur examines how algorithms and artificial intelligence are starting to run every aspect of our lives, and how we can shape the way they impact us Through the technology embedded in almost every major tech platform and every web-enabled device, algorithms and the artificial intelligence that underlies them make a staggering number of everyday decisions for us, from what products we buy, to where we decide to eat, to how we consume our news, to whom we date, and how we find a job. We've even delegated life-and-death decisions to algorithms--decisions once made by doctors, pilots, and judges. In his new book, Kartik Hosanagar surveys the brave new world of algorithmic decision-making and reveals the potentially dangerous biases they can give rise to as they increasingly run our lives. He makes the compelling case that we need to arm ourselves with a better, deeper, more nuanced understanding of the phenomenon of algorithmic thinking. And he gives us a route in, pointing out that algorithms often think a lot like their creators--that is, like you and me. Hosanagar draws on his experiences designing algorithms professionally--as well as on history, computer science, and psychology--to explore how algorithms work and why they occasionally go rogue, what drives our trust in them, and the many ramifications of algorithmic decision-making. He examines episodes like Microsoft's chatbot Tay, which was designed to converse on social media like a teenage girl, but instead turned sexist and racist; the fatal accidents of self-driving cars; and even our own common, and often frustrating, experiences on services like Netflix and Amazon. A Human's Guide to Machine Intelligence is an entertaining and provocative look at one of the most important developments of our time and a practical user's guide to this first wave of practical artificial intelligence.

Inhaltsangabe: Introduction: Over the time, many Internet users have rejected online advertisement. The reason is that users do not associate with the ordinary advertisement and therefore can not find a connection to it. The products and services shown on websites are not what a particular user wants to have, wishes or needs. This capstone should emphasize that through 'Predictive Behavioral Targeted' advertisement the insensitivity will be increased significantly in comparison to ordinary online advertisement while talking about WEB 2.0. Advertisement for specific products will be created and developed just for exact kinds of people and not for the mass. That will sell products much faster and companies or advertisement agencies do not have to place unnecessary spots, banners, etc. on websites anymore. This document will give precise analyzed information and answers to the question if 'Predictive Behavioral Targeting will change Online and Direct Marketing ways in near future'. To understand the principles of online marketing I will explain how traditional online marketing has been established, what kinds of marketing have been used the most, which ones have been most effective, which ones will continue to grow and have a huge impact on our society and its buying patterns.

In Creating Wicked Students, Paul Hanstedt argues that courses can and should be designed to present students with what are known as “wicked problems” because the skills of dealing with such knotty problems are what will best prepare them for life after college. As the author puts it, “this book begins with the assumption that what we all want for our students is that they be capable of changing the world. When a student leaves college, we want them to enter the world not as drones participating mindlessly in activities to which they’ve been appointed, but as thinking, deliberative beings who add something to society.” There’s a lot of talk in education these days about “wicked problems”—problems that defy traditional expectations or knowledge, problems that evolve over time: Zika, ISIS, political discourse in the era of social media. To prepare students for such wicked problems, they need to have wicked competencies, the ability to respond easily and on the fly to complex challenges. Unfortunately, a traditional education that focuses on content and skills often fails to achieve this sense of wickedness. Students memorize for the test, prepare for the paper, practice the various algorithms over and over again—but when the parameters or dynamics of the test or the paper or the equation change, students are often at a loss for how to adjust. This is a course design book centered on the idea that the goal in the college classroom—in all classrooms, all the time—is to develop students who are not just loaded with content, but capable of using that content in thoughtful, deliberate ways to make the world a better place. Achieving this goal requires a top-to-bottom reconsideration of courses, including student learning goals, text selection and course structure, day-to-day pedagogies, and assignment and project design. Creating Wicked Students takes readers through each step of the process, providing multiple examples at each stage, while always encouraging instructors to consider concepts and exercises in light of their own courses and students.

There is currently widespread interest in the Chinese economy, due to its huge and rapid growth, and the consequent impact on world business and the world economy. At the same time, there are concerns about China's political system, China's human rights record and the degree to which reform - the development of 'socialism with Chinese characteristics' - represent real liberalization. Providing an overview of earlier events in order to set the context in which economic and political development have taken place, the book traces economic and political growth in China from the early 1990s to the present. Covering Hong Kong, Macao, Tibet and Taiwan, the book discusses China's relations, including international trade with its neighbours and with the international community more widely. Other key topics covered include the growth of the market, the reform of state owned enterprises, human rights and SARS.
