Completely get rid of all the soap in the reservoir by rinsing it thoroughly. Do not use a cloth to dry the reservoir, as the fabric particles left behind might clog your reservoir, or even worse, end up in your coffee. Air drying is recommended. After drying, refill the tank and put it back in place with the Keurig.

The replacement of any Keurig circuit board or its re-writing is quite an advanced level of repair and its one that even Keurig themselves don't offer on their machines (they find it much more cost effective to just replace the whole machine rather than attempt the repair). However, if you have an old Keurig B40 Elite and a new circuit board
